HERO'S MISSION

By George Brandon

IT IS NOT as much the deed as public belief in the deed that makes the hero. So, to the Major, Major Blake of the Luftwaffe was a hero. Blake had a number of special attributes in the world and the way he handled himself, manner and character, and unusual temperaments. He had earned his stripes in the Middle East, the Balkans, and elsewhere.

He led the flight which was the first to be shot down, which was regarded as a feat at that time. He had shot down a number of Messerschmitts during the war. They were never taken to flight, and were usually regarded as trophies of war.

Only once had he been shot down, and that was in the Balkans. He was shot down by a plane which was flying above him. Why did he not get away? He was the only pilot in the flight who had a parachute.

He was shot down in the Balkans, and he was the only pilot in the flight who had a parachute. He was shot down in the Balkans, and he was the only pilot in the flight who had a parachute. He was shot down in the Balkans, and he was the only pilot in the flight who had a parachute.

And now Major Blake, who had been shot down in the Balkans, was now in the Balkans. He was shot down in the Balkans, and he was the only pilot in the flight who had a parachute. He was shot down in the Balkans, and he was the only pilot in the flight who had a parachute.

ing man had been riding the airwaves.

When he got to his feet he looked around him. He saw the enemy's challenge and then, "I will be down the Major. Our task is to get you down."

Major Blake's eyes were fixed on the enemy's plane.

A low, sleek, and fast plane, it was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind.

The plane was flying low, and it was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind.

The plane was flying low, and it was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind.

"What are you doing?" Blake asked as he flew past.

"I am sorry, Major," the other voice answered. "The Luftwaffe thought the other plane was flying. But I have a message for you." The plane of the Luftwaffe came in a moment and Blake, getting into the plane, pressed forward as the other plane left the light. Blake saw that the other plane was flying. Blake looked up and saw the other plane. Then he pressed forward as the other plane left the light. Blake looked up and saw the other plane.

He heard Blake's voice. "The Luftwaffe is ready!"

He looked into the sky and saw the other plane. He looked into the sky and saw the other plane. He looked into the sky and saw the other plane. He looked into the sky and saw the other plane.

He looked up, startled at the sight of the other plane.

"What are you doing?" Blake asked as he flew past.

Blake looked down. The plane was flying low, and it was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind. It was the only one of its kind.

"It is coming," Blake said. "Get back to your plane." He wanted to look into space as he had done in many other times.
